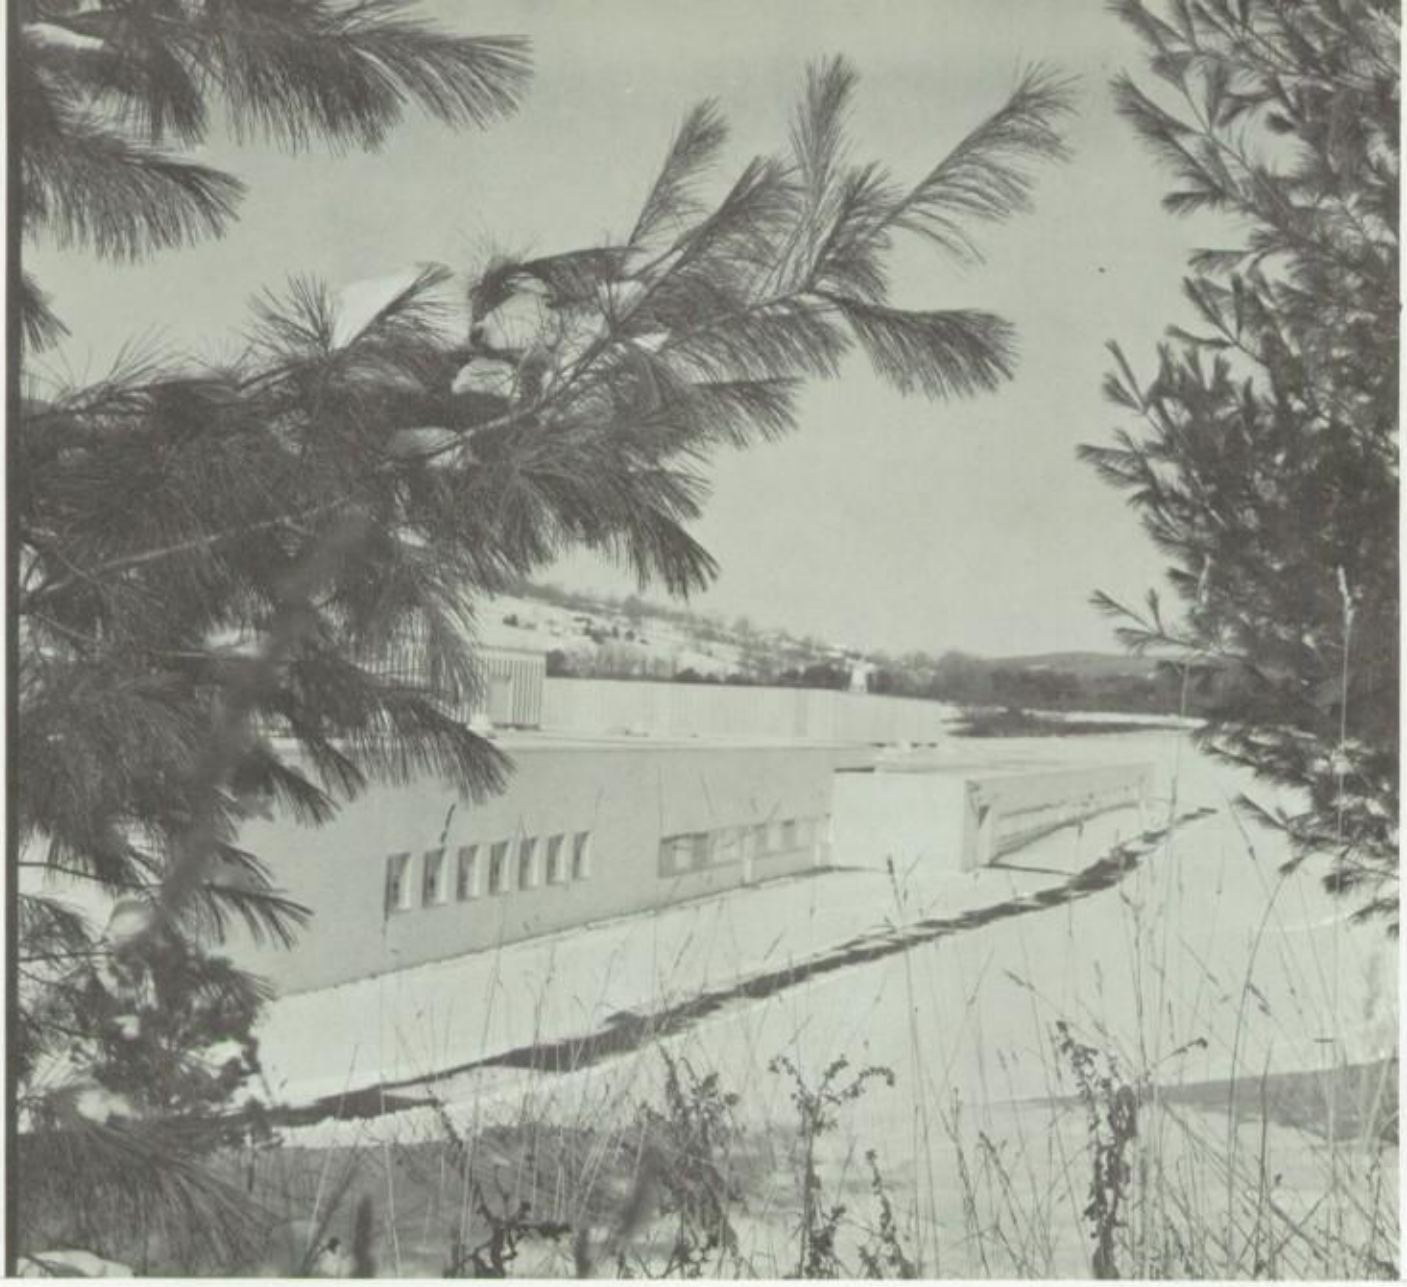
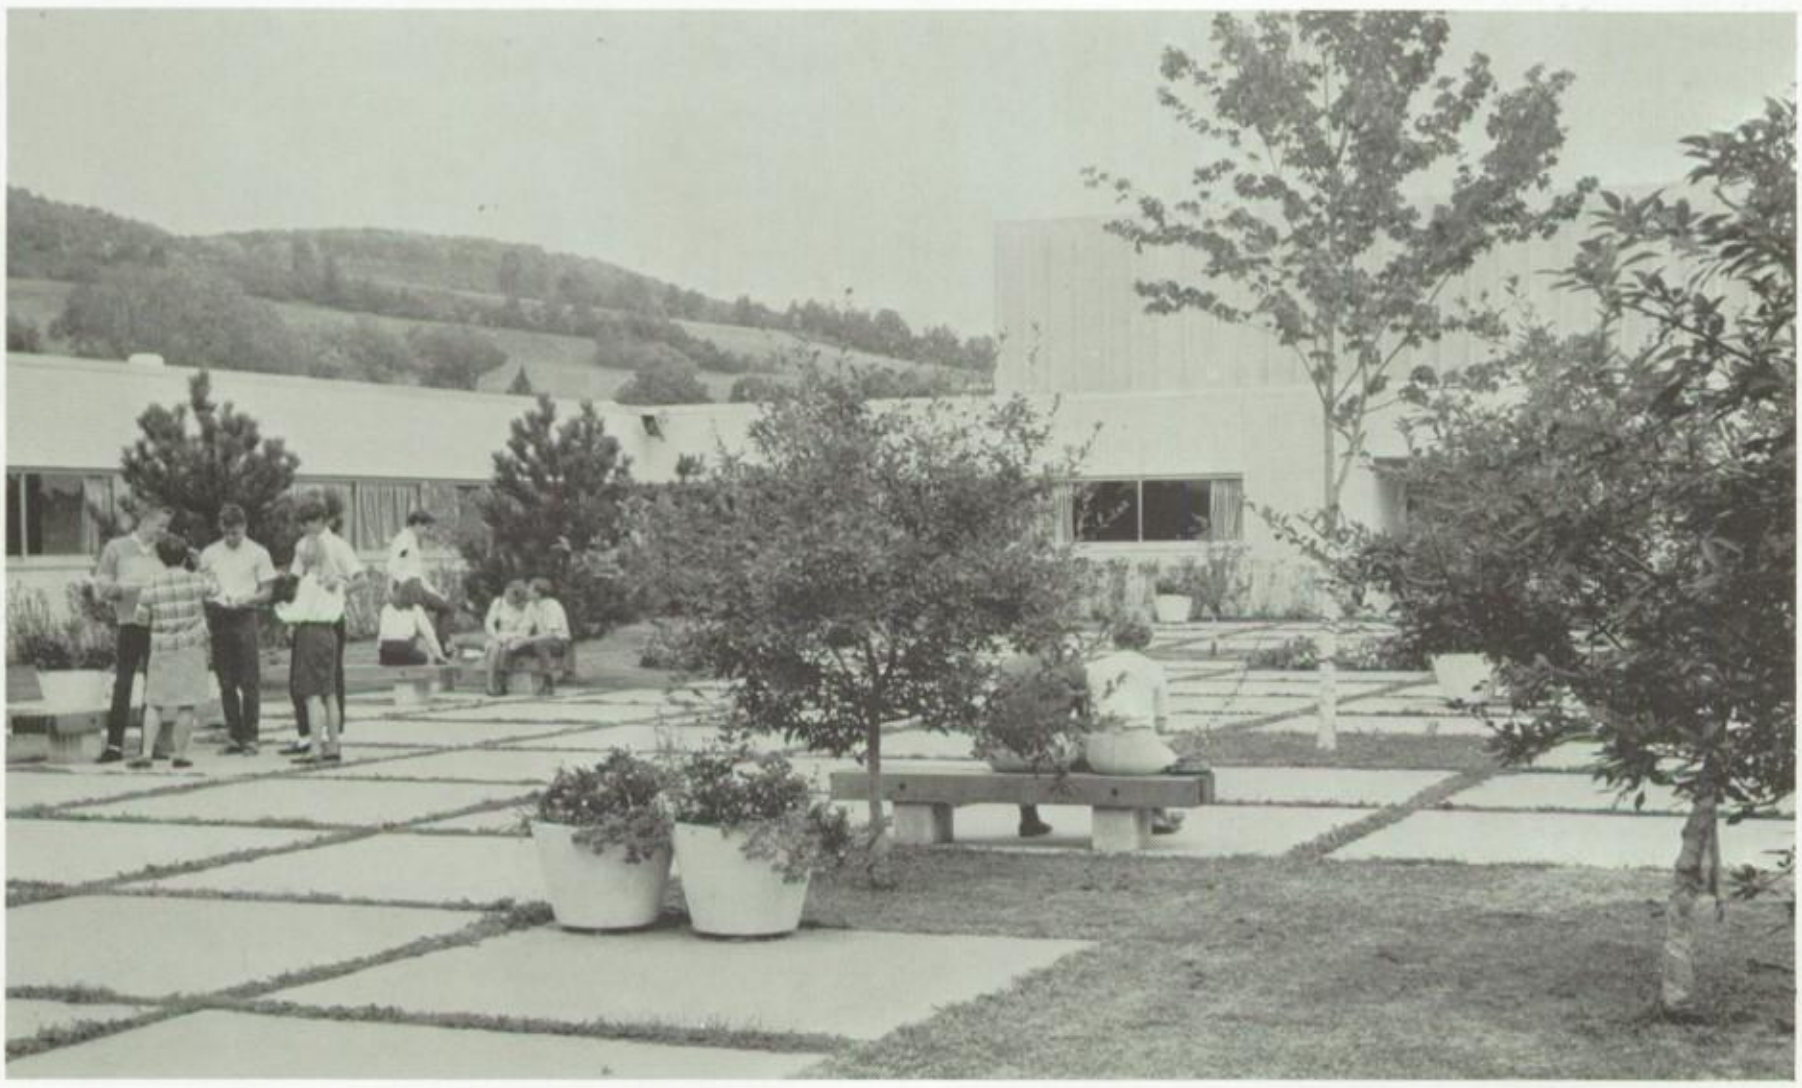
Summer, autumn, winter, and spring—each creates a different beauty. The summer sun bathes our blossoming courtyard in a glow of warmth. Near the boxes of geraniums and petunias, students seek a shady nook or a sunny bench where they can meditate alone, study for an exam, or relax with friends. In autumn, the red maples form an archway as they line the front of the building, and the rolling hills surround the school in a burst of russet and gold. The snow laden pines and hemlocks mark the advent of winter, and it, too, passes in a shimmer of ice and a gust of wind along the winding approach. Slowly, gentle spring envelopes our courtyard and grounds with an abundance of bright tulips and rose-colored flowering crab trees to bring to an end a year at OHS.





Culture, an important facet of education, provides an opportunity for students to express themselves and observe their individual feelings portrayed in someone else. Student dramatists stage Broadway plays, the varsity choir performs popular musicals, and the band presents a spring concert. Displayed throughout the school, designs and sketches illustrate students' cultural initiative in a tangible form of art. Exciting assemblies bring outside performers to our school, broadening the cultural horizons of many students.

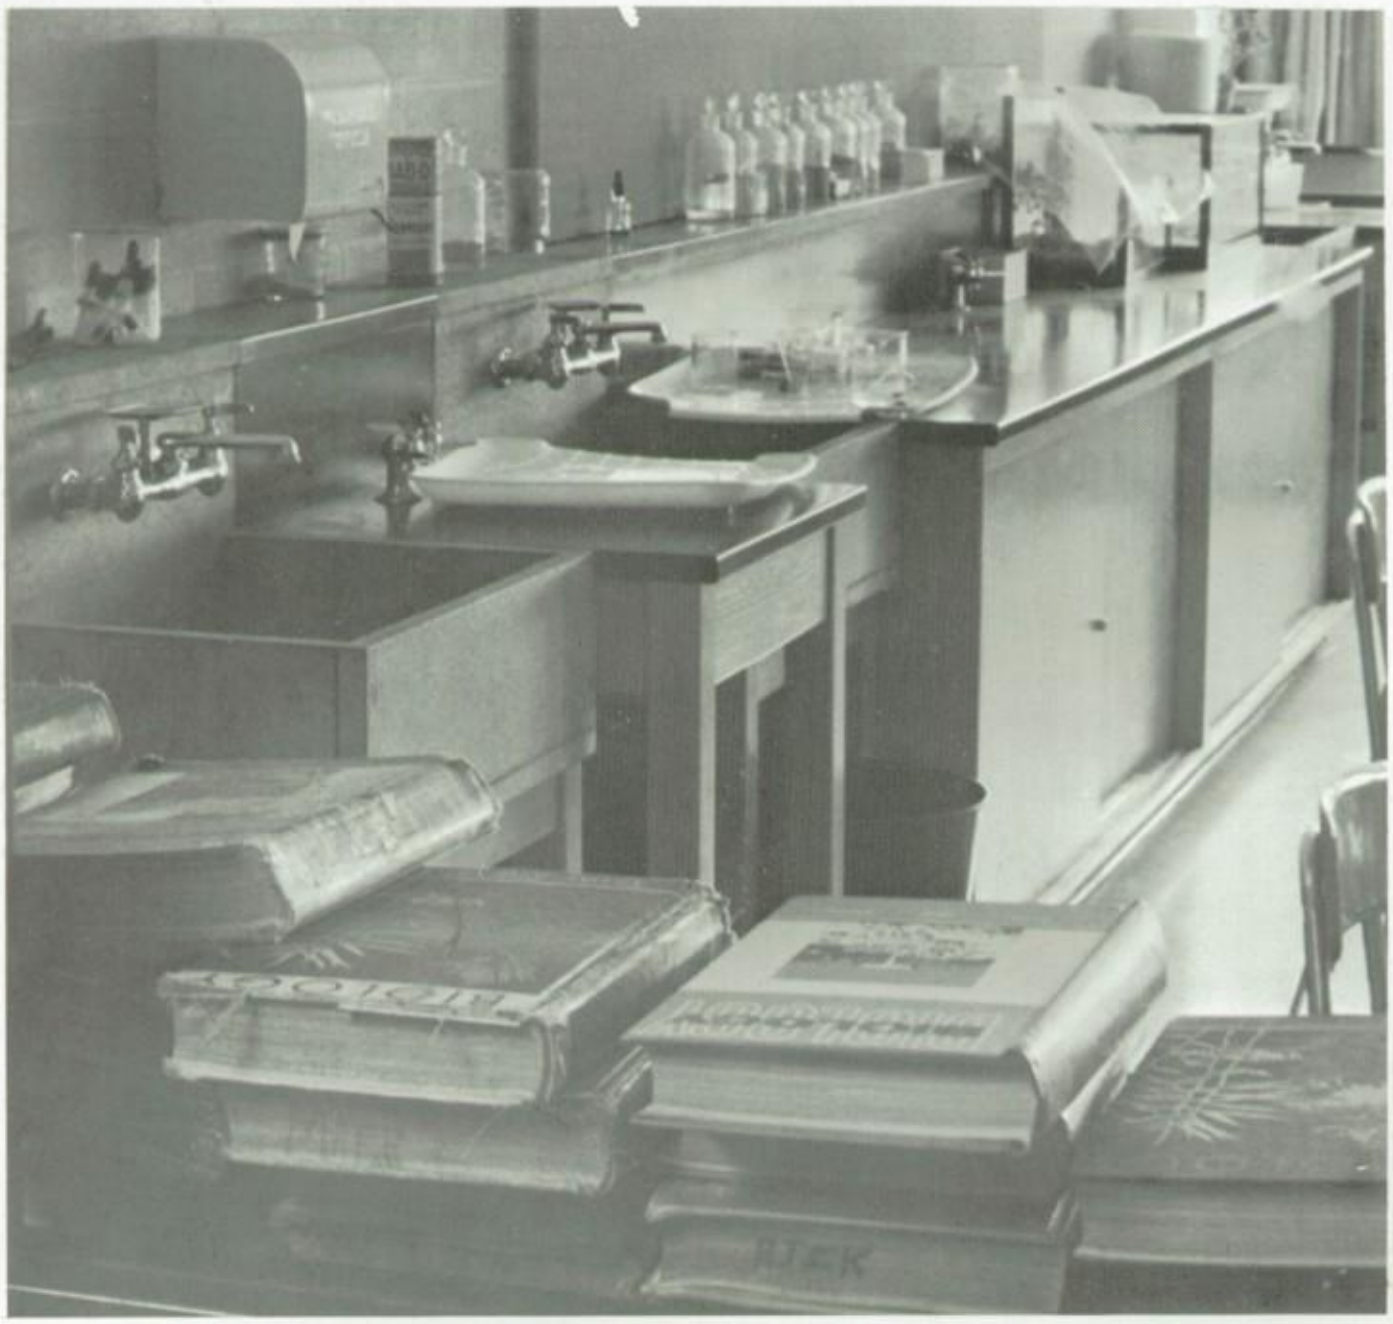
Academic achievements are the cornerstone of OHS. Delving into the archives of ancient history or perusing the periodicals of the week, students become aware of their place in the world. Interests range from the scientific measurement of chemicals to the artistic creation of a vase, from the solution of an algebraic equation to the discussion of a Shakespearean tragedy. Students accept the scholastic challenge, and prepare for competition when they leave OHS.



Sports play a major role in the lives of OHSans. Athletic competition develops each individually and teaches him to accept success or defeat with a sportsmanlike attitude. Spectators and athletes alike develop stronger school spirit and greater pride in OHS. Whether we win or lose, our team members are respected for their courage in execution, their ability in action, and their conduct in competition. Thus, we are successful and each can always be proud of himself and his fellow students.

Eight weeks of intensive rehearsing and set building brought to life the melodious Rodgers and Hammerstein music of "Oklahoma!" This year's spring show found the famed "Surrey with the Fringe on the Top" on the OHS stage as the varsity choir, Dramatics club, shop and art departments combined forces to present the Broadway musical.

Class of 1967 first through new school

Senior class officers pose for their picture. Seated are Edward Syron, treasurer; Cynthia Wayman, secretary. Standing are Peter Hattem, vice-president; Mr. Gallucci, adviser; and Gerald Leach, president.

What greater distinction is there than being the first? This year's senior class is the first to study three years in the picturesque surroundings of the new school.

Senior activities began in October with a record sale of magazines to finance senior festivities. The Winter Weekend broke the monotony of the winter months. Only for seniors, the event featured a Saturday evening Mardi-Gras, a league basketball game, and an afternoon of tobogganing.

Spring brought the traditional picnic at Gilbert Lake. Homeroom baseball rivalry and barbecued chicken added to the carefree atmosphere of the occasion.

The final high school year of the Class of 1967 came to a memorable close with the annual banquet and ball. Baccalaureate and graduation ceremonies brought the three years in the new school to an end.

Sophomores, juniors face new curriculum

With just one more year to go, juniors weathered the gale of countless hours of examinations such as the Air Force Qualifying Exam, the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test, and the many College Boards.

Before them loomed a new and challenging curriculum which included modern chemistry and a college-type history course.

Sophomores survived the change in schools even with the numerous innovations. The new computerized schedules resulted in minor confusion.

Boys' gym classes included girls, classes had no classroom, and many students had excess study halls.

Other changes at OHS included mid-terms instead of quarterlies, new library cards, and yearly history regents.

This has been a year of challenge and change. Juniors have learned to accept the responsibility that will be theirs as seniors. Sophomores have become participating members in high school life.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—Mr. Stephen Jamba, administrative assistant, Mr. Robert C. White, superintendent of schools, Mr. Thomas E. Hickey, Mr. Robert E. Shepard, Mr. Gabriel Harris, vice-president, Mr. Ani P. Colone, president, Dr. John R. Leahy, Dr. Charles W. Hunt, Mr. Roger G. Hughes, Mr. Edward S. Onody, assistant for business, Mr. James VanWoert, treasurer.

Mr. Robert C. White, superintendent of schools, stands in front of the Riverside School, one of the two new elementary schools completed this year.

School Board advocates new vocational school

With the completion of two elementary schools, Riverside and Greater Plains, the Board of Education has supervised the construction of four new schools in the last ten years, an addition to another, and continuing renovations at the Junior High School.

Emphasis has shifted from building to studies of the total school program. Mr. White and the Board of Education receive and consider evaluations and reports of changes in the local curriculum.

Participating with the Board of Cooperative Educational Services for Otsego County's proposed vocational school, the Board of Education, by supplying financial assistance, anticipates that any student who will profit from the school will be able to attend.

The new vocational school will begin next September using temporary facilities in the Chestnut Street School and other buildings in Oneonta.

Accreditation includes next ten year period

Two years ago, Mr. Belden's dream materialized with the completion of a new high school. This year, after months of self-evaluation and preparation for the evaluating committee, the school received accreditation for the next ten years.

Much to Mr. Belden's satisfaction, the accreditation was extended for the maximum five year period, a first for OHS and Mr. Belden as principal of the school.

OHS is one of the few New York state schools to achieve accreditation by the Middlestate Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools every year since its accreditation in 1928.

Mr. Belden, principal, actively participates in school affairs. Here he discusses senior plans with Cyndy Wayman, class secretary.

Mr. Belden discusses the new science syllabus with Mr. Occhino.

At the senior ball, concluding the senior activities, Mrs. Charles Belden stops to pin on her husband's boutonniere.

GE computer schedules all students, teachers

Confusion, caused by the change to computerized scheduling of students, teachers, and classes, kept the guidance office busy during the first few weeks of school.

Under a new system of counseling, students were divided alphabetically among the three counselors, enabling them to have the same counselor throughout high school.

At a tea during Christmas vacation, alumni discussed facets of college life not mentioned in catalogs with college-bound seniors.

In May, juniors participated in College Night at which representatives from about forty New York state colleges talked with students and parents.

Students in study halls find the individual library carrel a quiet place to read, prepare for exams, and do homework.

Library changes include cards, special programs

Expanded facilities, an increased number of books, and the new library card system marked the changes in the school library.

Replacing the library pass system, library cards, punched by the study hall teacher and the librarian, permitted students to use the library one period a day.

An increased paperback collection includes books for the revised curriculum of junior and sophomore history classes as well as special collections for Latin American and Russian Studies.

Under library sponsorship, Mr. Squires presented a reading from Shakespeare, Mrs. Wilder's sophomore English class read Dickens' A Christmas Carol, and Mr. Signorino showed a filmstrip on the American Negro during National Brotherhood Week. The display case, with illustrations by John Brent, carried out the themes of these programs.

Carol Decker and Tim Parsons patiently wait for their library cards to be punched. This system, initiated this year, replaced passes to the library.

Supplementing the study of medieval literature in senior English, Paula Marino, David Wakin, and Betty Powell constructed models of a mead hall. In addition, students sang original ballads and sketched characters of that period.

Speakers, trips highlight studies of literature

Speakers from SUCO on Hemingway and modern poetry and trips to Stratford and Fallsburg highlighted English students' studies in literature.

In March, two bus loads of sophomores saw the American Shakespeare Festival's Julius Caesar. One hundred twenty seniors spent a day in April at the Catskill Shakespeare Festival Theatre attending Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet and Rostand's Cyrano de Bergerac.

One hundred eighty seniors collectively spent more than a thousand weeks on research papers ranging in subject matter from the Psalms to LSD; the art of karate to trout fishing; Ivan the Terrible to selective service.

Through federal funds, the English department added extensively to its filmstrip and record collection, received a new overhead projector, and added many new sets of paperbacks for class use.

Paperbacks replace text in new junior history

A completely new syllabus confronted this year's sophomore and junior history classes. OHS, as one of twenty pilot school systems, tested the tentative revision of social studies in New York state.

A newly organized world history course with increased emphasis on individual study faced tenth graders.

Juniors experienced the greatest change, switching from texts to paperback books. The revised course covered American history by topics, such as the American people, government and politics, and the United States in world affairs.

In addition to the required American history II course, electives were offered seniors including Russian studies, Latin American studies, and economics.

Sophomores and juniors took experimental tests at the end of the year based on the new syllabus.

In preparation for exams, Mr. Signorino's senior American history students review the presidential administrations.

Senior SMSG completes modern math sequence

With the addition of SMSG 12, a group of seniors completed the modern math series begun in the junior high.

The course, which paralleled the traditional twelfth year in greater depth, differed in its topical approach to math. More emphasis was placed on mathematical structure as basic background for college calculus.

Seniors were also offered Math 12, an advanced algebra course, and Senior Math in which they studied statistics, spatial geometry, set theory, logic, analytic geometry, and introductory calculus.

Geometry students solved proofs, memorized theorems, and constructed geometric figures. Math 11 students tackled logarithms, trigonometric functions, and intermediate algebra.

Other courses offered in the math curriculum included elementary and intermediate algebra, trigonometry, SMSG 12, and SMSG 11.

Concentrating on the difficult advanced algebra examination, Leslie Harris attempts to solve a problem.

Substituting for Mr. Miller, Tim Chase interprets a mathematical equation for the benefit of the SMSG 12 class.

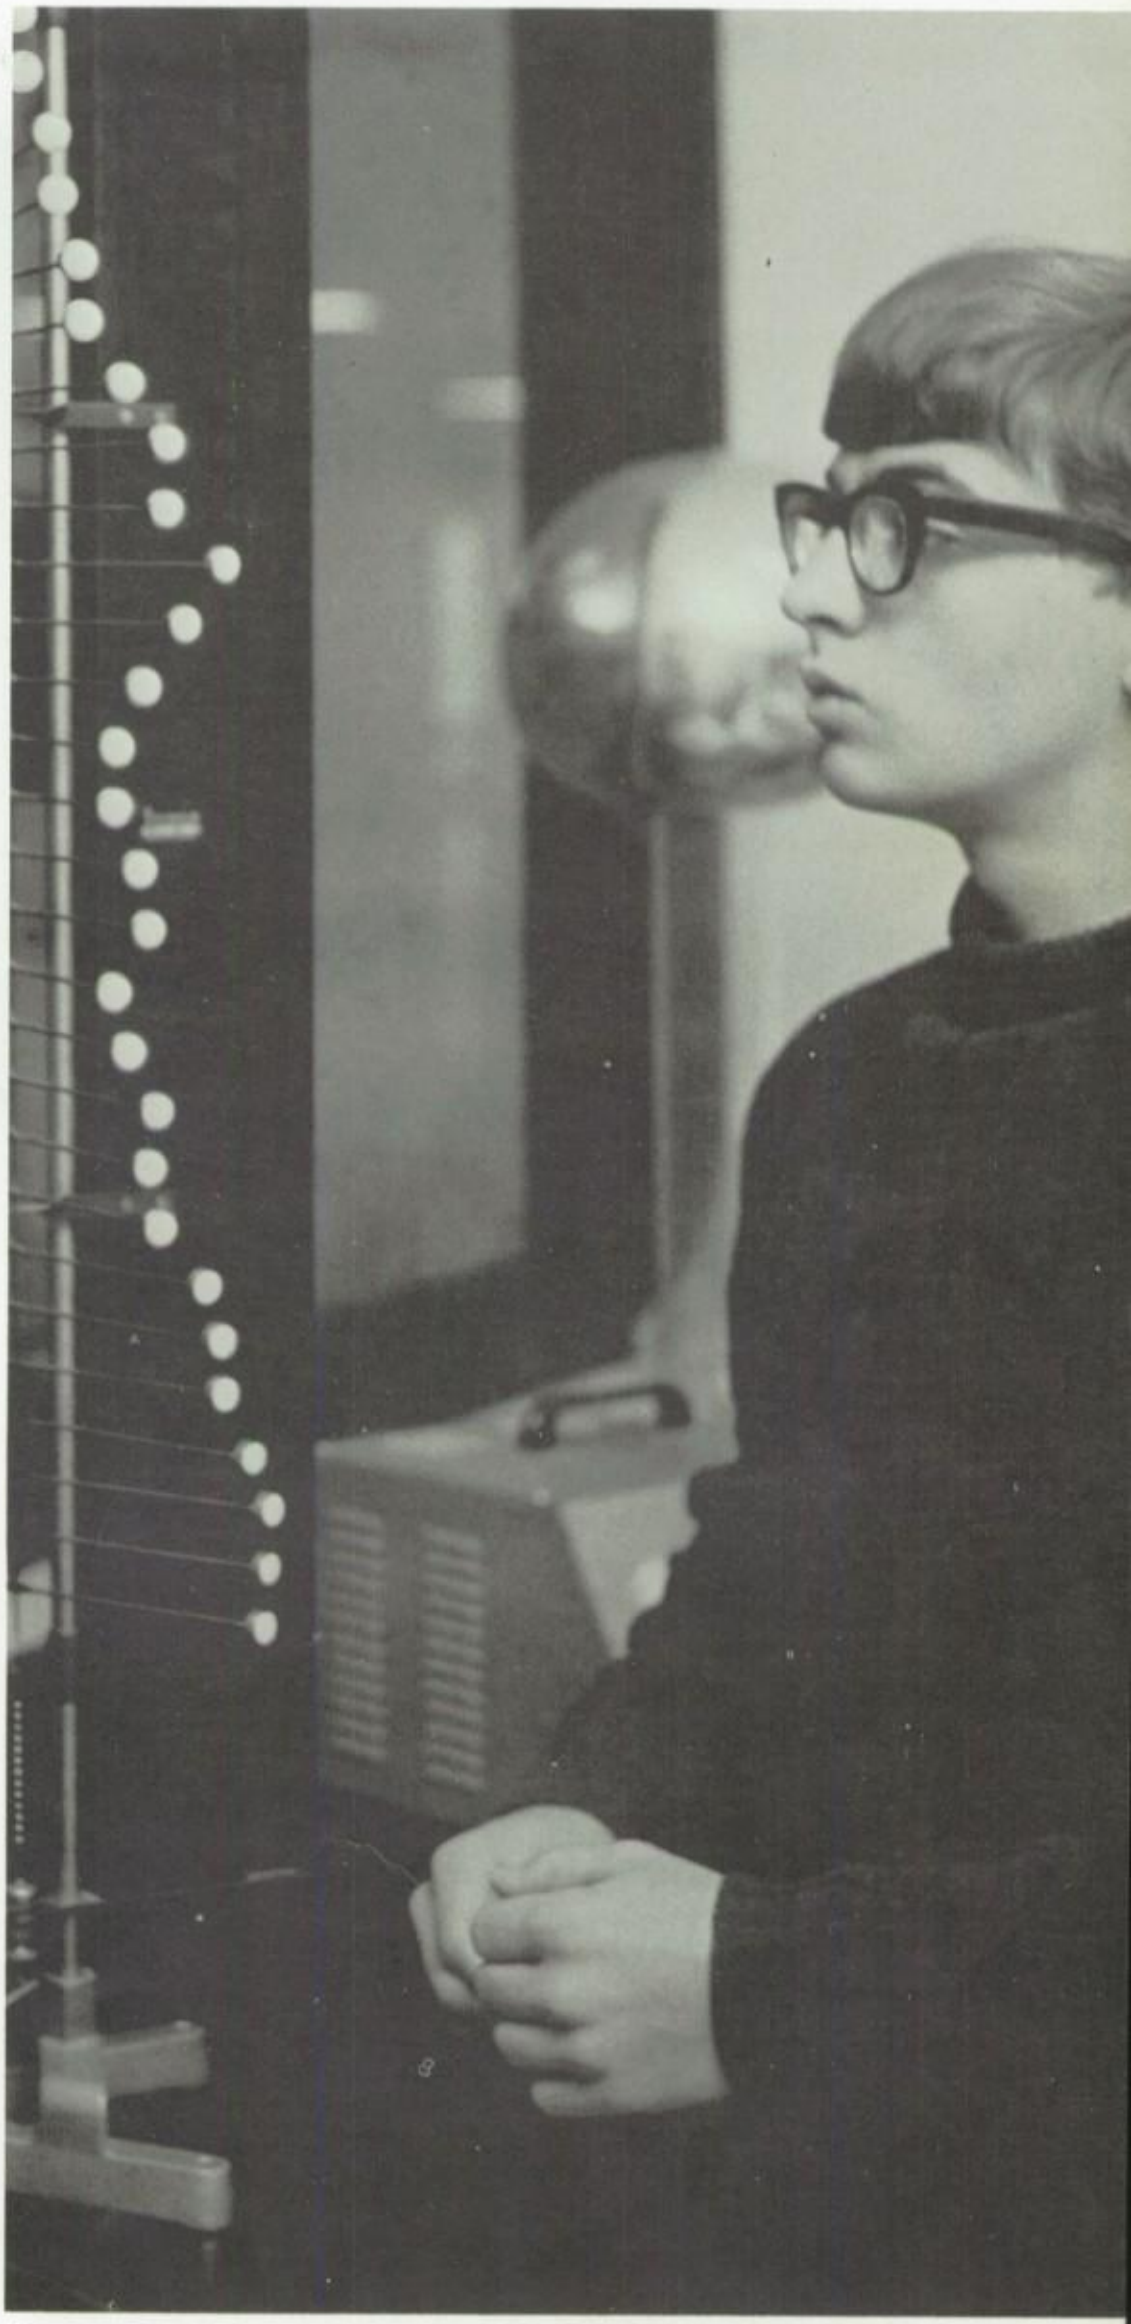
New science program reflects modern concepts

This year's science program reflected the statewide transition to a new syllabus. Begun primarily in the advanced classes, the curriculum change based the study of science more on theory and less on practical application.

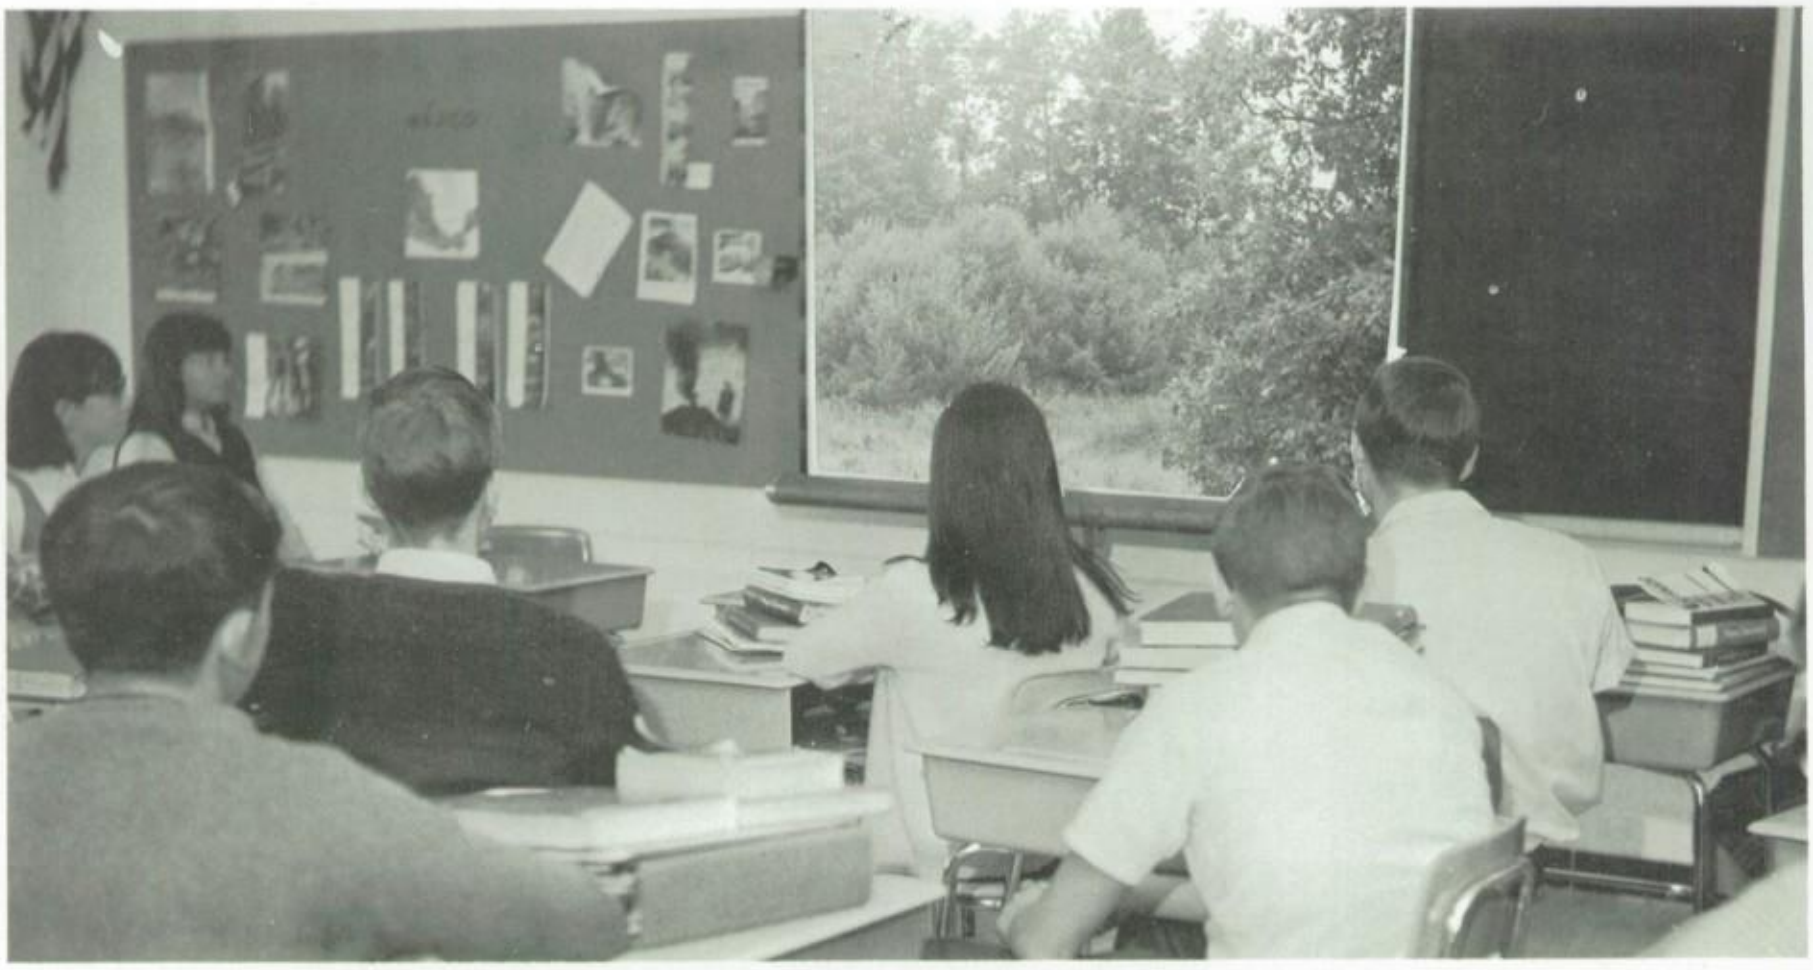
New textbooks and improved equipment accompanied the advanced subject matter. The interrelationship of the three major scientific fields was an important aspect of the new syllabus.

Biology students concentrated more on cellular function and evolution of life from inorganic compounds. Quantum theory and nuclear chemistry were introduced in chemistry classes to acquaint students with the concepts of physics.

Regents examinations based on the new syllabus gauged the students progress in mastering the concepts and theories.



Demonstrating the variations, Joe Muehl studies transverse wave patterns during physics lab.



A filmstrip of the Pyrenees interests students in Mrs. Smaila's Spanish II class as they study customs and geography.

In a brief moment of relaxation, German students sing folk songs while Herr Schaefer plays his accordion.

Students' foreign travels enliven language classes

Language classes this year took on an air of world travel as students gained first hand knowledge of foreign lands from fellow students and teachers. Student travelers, returning from Europe and South America, showed slides and pictures to language classes.

Along with the continued use of the ALM language program and language laboratory, French classes developed a greater continuity between the junior and senior high.

Beginning courses in French, German, Spanish, and Latin studied conversation, grammar, and reading comprehension in preparation for advanced classes.

The French 4 class read The Three Musketeers, Les Misérables, L'Etrangé, and several French periodicals. German students, in contrast, read short stories, while Cicero and Ovid Sallust captured the attention of Latin 3 pupils.

Business course stresses vocational preparation

By the addition of Office Practice I, the business department broadened its curriculum to better prepare students for jobs as typists and office workers immediately upon graduation. Office Practice I is a continuation of basic typing which includes units on manuscript, statistic and legal typing.

As seniors, the office practice students complete their training with Office Practice II, which gives them a chance to apply the theory they have acquired to a realistic situation as student secretary.

Distribution students learned about the various opportunities available in the field of retailing and about basic jobs such as buying, advertising and design, accounting and control, sales promotion, store layout and stock control. Planning the organization of their own businesses, business management students studied business and economics in depth.

Courses in bookkeeping, business arithmetic, shorthand, transcription, business law, salesmanship, and personal typing completed the diversified offerings of the department.

Business student Judy Stanton deftly prepares a stencil as part of her secretarial duties in secretarial practice.

Music, art contribute knowledge of culture

Continuing in their contributions to the cultural background of students, the music and art departments offered a wide range of courses. In addition to band, orchestra, and choir, the music department includes music theory and music appreciation.

Students taking music theory concentrated on the fundamentals of writing music, while those in the appreciation classes discussed different styles of music and music history.

Music appreciation students augmented their studies with a field trip to The Museum of Musical Instruments at Deansboro, New York, where students had a chance to try several ancient instruments.

For the first time this year, art students used a potter's wheel, made gigantic papier maché animals with chicken-wire bases, and created photo montages.

Art students deviated from their usual studies to work on posters and scenery for Come Blow Your Horn, Oklahoma, and the Christmas assembly.

Football season inspires seniors, Karen Duffy, Andi Muehl, and John Brent to paint these colorful posters for the Norwich game.

The varsity choir, under the direction of Mr. Willis Walley, rehearses daily for its many public appearances throughout the year.

Students visit nurse, learn defensive driving

OHSans, enrolled in driver education, learned the importance of safe, defensive driving. In cars furnished by Hotaling's Chrysler-Plymouth, students practiced city driving, skidding, and thruway driving.

In class, they learned to use road maps, discussed interstate highway systems, saw films on the parts of the car, and heard special reports on seat belts, insurance, and traffic laws.

Taking care of thousands of student visits, the health office provided both dental and health care. Health service personnel gave physical and dental check-ups and tested vision and hearing.

In accordance with a new state law, the health office checked student's records for polio immunization as well as giving health appraisals for working papers and interschool sports.

Home ec department offers varied courses

Home economics courses emphasized the theoretical principles of cooking, sewing, and care of the family rather than the practical application of skills.

In addition to the three year homemaking sequence for a home economics major, the department offered elective courses in child development, family and community health, home furnishing, money management, nutrition, textiles, and clothing and family values for democratic living.

Students prepared full course dinners, studied interior decorating, and learned the fundamentals of family economy, and child psychology in preparation for future responsibilities.

The Nutrition and Meal Management class serves a complete chicken dinner, planned and prepared in the home economics suite.

Senior gym electives include golf, tennis

The new trend in physical education classes this year was individual sports that have a carry over value after high school.

With the addition of a two-hole golf course and a new archery range and hockey field, seniors enjoyed a choice of sports, including golf, archery, hockey, soccer, and tennis in the spring and fall programs.

Seniors learned the fundamentals of driving, chipping, and putting on the school golf course. The Wilber Park tennis courts were the site of tennis classes in fall and spring.

During the winter, all students followed a required schedule of activities which included basketball, volleyball, badminton, table tennis, gymnastics, modern dance, and wrestling.

During a preliminary game to the class tournament, two competing gym squads struggle to obtain control of the basketball.

Demonstrating the forehand stroke, Mr. Drago teaches a senior boys' gym class the fundamentals of tennis on the Wilber Park courts.

Students build engines, construct iron furniture

Building a cabinet in woodworking class, boys practice the techniques of precise measurement and accurate construction.

Students in Mr. Donald Short's building and construction classes kept the wood shop in almost continuous use building scenery for Oklahoma!, putting finishing touches on the outdoor concession stand, and constructing a garage for a Fair Street owner.

Members of the general wood shop class, a full year course, built individual projects of their choice. The remainder of Mr. Short's 115 students were enrolled in mechanical drawing I and II and general woodworking, each a half year course.

In addition to courses in general metal and machine shop, auto mechanics, and electricity, Mr. Richard Hobbie taught girls the fundamentals of mechanics.

Girls taking home mechanics became familiar with home machines and learned to solder, wire, and repair common household appliances. They used machines in the metal shop to make decorative wall plaques, lamps, and wrought iron furniture.

Auto mechanics students took apart and put together four automobile engines available in the shop. Topics covered in the electricity course included fundamental laws of electricity, model motors, wiring, and practical household electricity.

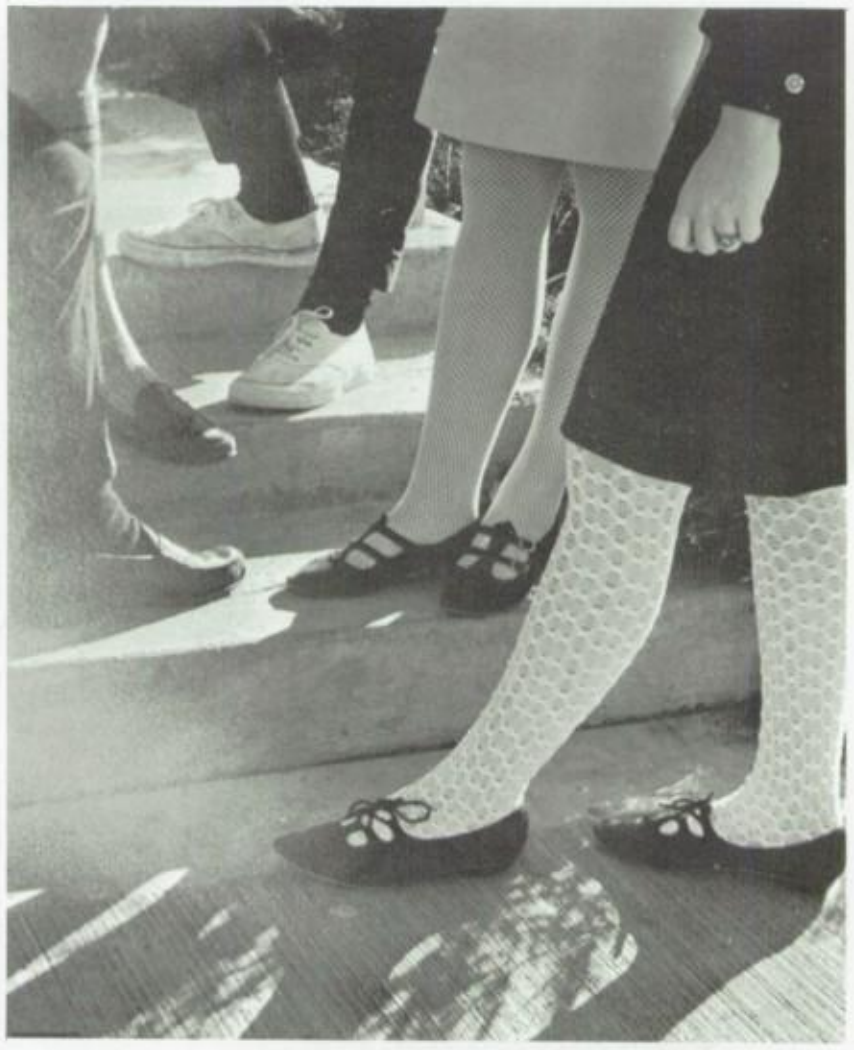
Contemplating strategic chess moves, Jim Ballentine and Al White attempt to outwit their opponents, Dan Parker and Dave Magellan.

Inspecting the four dimensional statue of an Afghan hound, the gift of the senior class of 1966, Martha Baker and Joanne Guenette model some of this season's fashions. Complemented by matching shoes and shoulder bags, the girls display the poorboy sweater and the print suit.

Fads in fashion captivate student imagination

Hair styles this year ranged from Pam Naatz's, long and shiny, to the closely cropped cut of Andi Muehl.

Boys became more fashion conscious this year. Cecil Baker sports a bright paisley shirt and cord pants, while Chuck Fox follows the mod trend of wide-belted plaid slacks.



With the advent of cool weather, boys resorted to dark socks with their gym sneakers and penny loafers. Girls' fall footwear included textured stockings, knee socks, suede shoes, and loafers.

Leather sandals and dirty white sneakers add to the relaxed atmosphere of summer school, in which 552 students participated.

Gathering in the library conference room, foreign students compare Oneonta and their own country with Dean Kellerhouse, a junior who will be a Rotary Exchange student to Argentina next year. Around the table are Beatriz Clavel, Argentina; Dirk Koning, Netherlands; Annika Rohlen, Sweden; Dean Kellerhouse; Emily Cheong, Malaysia; Malou Kirchhofer, Switzerland; Liselotte Viehweg, Switzerland; and William Wong, China.

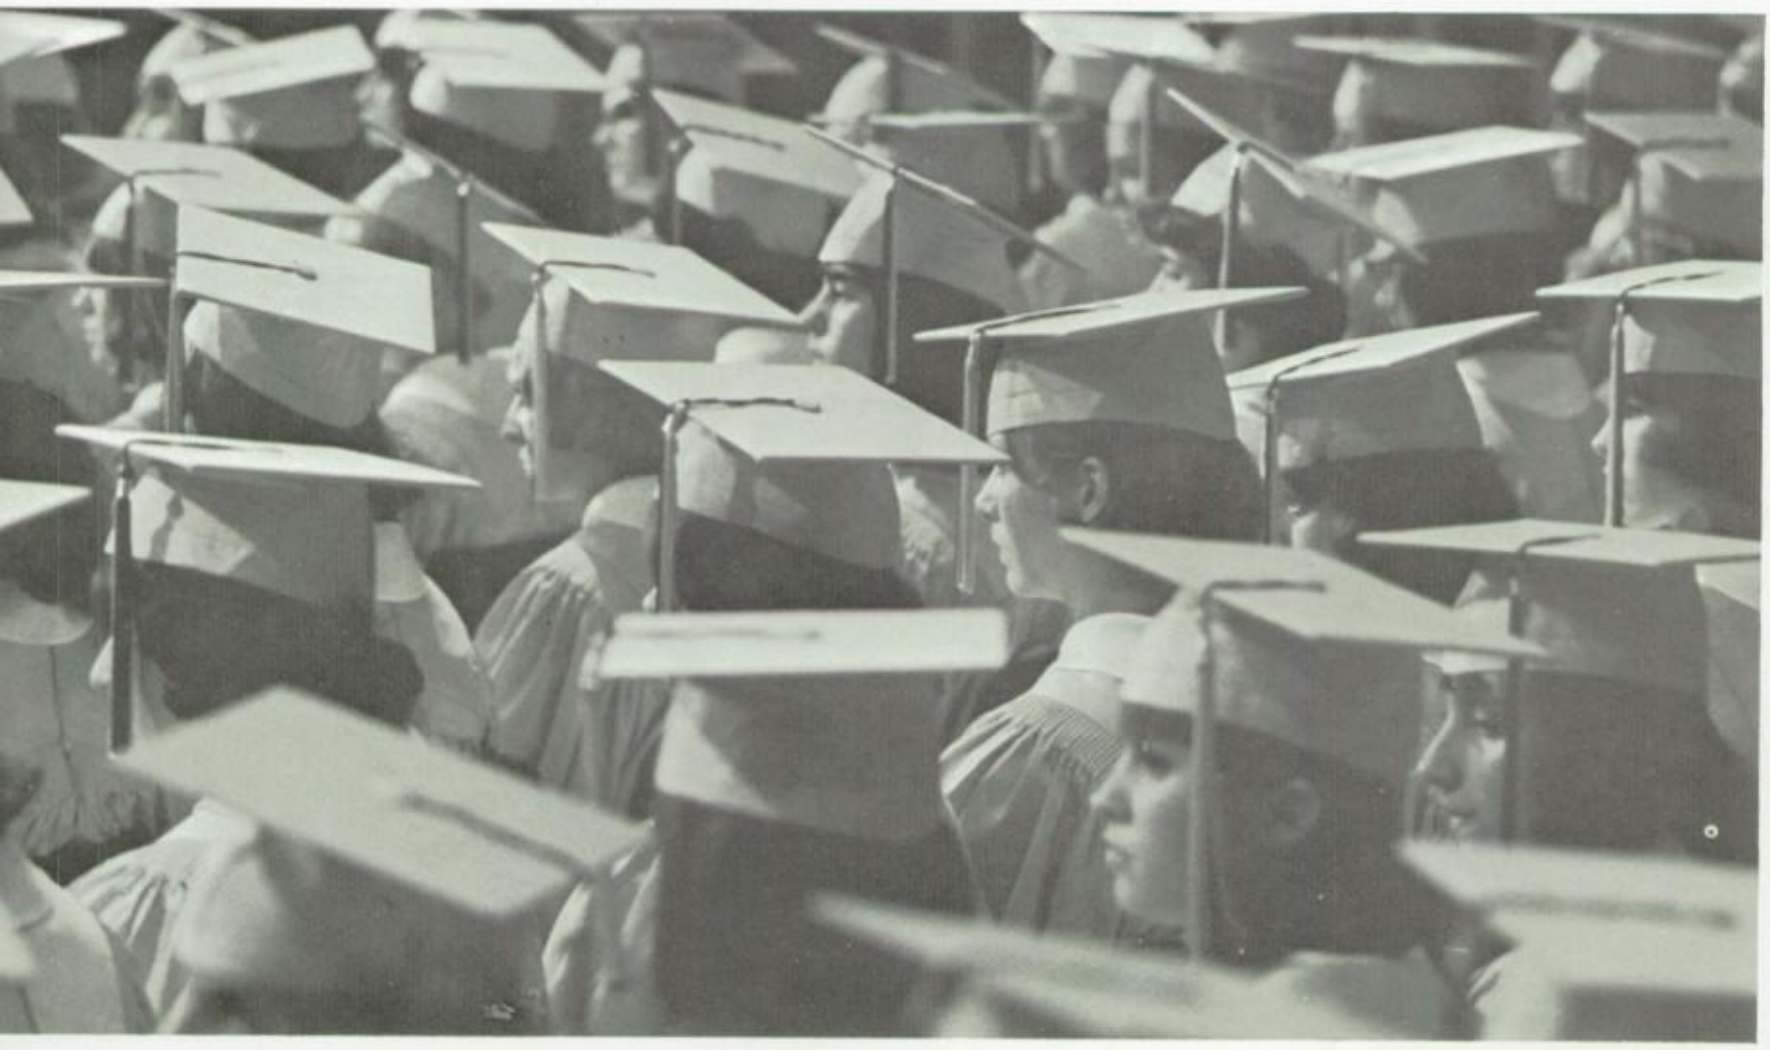
Graduation caps high school traditions

During the final moments of high school graduation, 268 seniors reflect upon the joy, sorrow, and excitement of being a student.



Following the candletight induction ceremony this fall, new Honor Society members, Joe Carline and Pam Morgan, review the recently signed scroll.

Honor Society inducts at candlelight ceremony

Beginning the year with a note of solemnity, junior members of National Honor Society inducted twenty seniors into the organization in an assembly October 28.

New members signed the honor scroll and listened as their classmates presented speeches on scholarship, service, leadership, and character, four essential membership qualifications.

The group held a Christmas tea December 20, for all college-attending students of the class of 1966.

In the spring, honor society members participated in a foreign exchange assembly held in the Andrew S. Draper high school auditorium.

At the spring tea honoring the faculty, junior members were inducted into the group and Tom Delaney, president, presented a gift to the faculty.

The society donated award money to two students for excellence in physics and biology.

Council adopts orphan, finances foreign exchange

Scanning an atlas for a village in Southeast Asia, Student Council officers, Terry Cook and Tom Delaney, plan the adoption of an orphan.

Sponsoring and financing the foreign exchange program was the Student Council's main project. Karen Wilson and JoAnn Lambros spent two months in Peru as exchange students during the summer of 1966.

Under the auspices of the Student Council, funds were solicited during the annual Tag Day, augmenting club donations in the Foreign Exchange Fund. The Council held a tea in December honoring local exchange students.

Highlighting the winter holiday season, Mistletoe Magic reconstructed the atmosphere of a long-ago Christmas. Evergreen trees, pine boughs, mistletoe, and an old-fashioned sleigh created the mood.

For the first time, the Council sponsored the adoption of a Southeast Asian orphan. Students contributed to provide for her welfare for a one-year period.

Another first was the Council's Career Night, May 3. Men and women from the community, representing diverse occupations, gave informal talks about their careers to interested students.

As in previous years, the Council operated a concession stand at most home athletic events.

Leaders club, Varsity 'O' sponsor athletic activities

In addition to helping with girls' intramurals, GLC members initiated a program to assist the gym teachers in the girls' locker room. They sponsored a tri-county basketball game and organized the first tri-county gymnastics meet.

Serving the school and community in additional ways, Girls' Leaders Club provided a needy family with an Easter dinner and sponsored a bus to the Ilion basketball game.

Varsity O Club, an honorary sports organization, sponsored programs for home football games. Fund raising projects enabled the club to hold the Awards Banquet and purchase a projector for the physical education department.

The club's projects included a talent show, the football concession stand, and a basketball game between the Harlem Astronauts and high school faculty.

FTA, FNC aid students in planning future careers

Students interested in health careers listened to visiting speakers on the topics of inhalation therapy, public health nursing, and degree programs.

Future Nurses also toured the new Health Center at SUCO and attended the Student Health Conference in Albany. In May, members of the club gave a tea to acquaint ninth graders with the purpose and activities of the Future Nurses Club.

Observing classes in elementary schools and assisting high school teachers helped members of the Future Teachers of America to understand the responsibilities of a teaching career.

Club members tutored students and helped foreign exchange students with language and reading barriers. Three delegates attended a teaching conference, April 7 and 8 in Rochester.

Departing on an Outing Club excursion, Mrs. Koenig and members of the group anticipate climbing the snow covered hills behind the school in search of a camping site for a spring overnight.

Avid hikers visit Vlei, climb mountain trails

Escaping the pressures of every day studies, members of the Outing Club found adventure and compatibility in group hikes and overnights. A bicycle hike down the backroad to Otego was just the beginning.

The November hike to the Vlei proved both educational and enjoyable; clubbers learned of the Sundew and discovered a patch of cranberries which they picked and later transformed into cranberry jelly with the aid of Mrs. Koenig's bunsen burner.

The last of the winter outings found carefree but chilly hikers roasting hot dogs by the table rocks in back of Hartwick College on a February afternoon.

April saw the group packed for an overnight at Gifford Hill, and the sojourn at Whetstone Gulf June 3–5 climaxed the Outing Club activities.

Pep Club cheers; Key Club builds roster board

Conducting a panel discussion on college life at a tea in December, Key Club invited a group of last year's graduates to speak with OHSans.

In addition to providing programs for basketball games and wrestling matches, the club purchased sweaters and supervised the building of a basketball roster board.

Earning money through bake sales, a rummage sale, and a paper drive, the Pep Club sponsored buses to a football and a basketball game. The girls attended football games as a group to lead the cheering sections.

Sparking enthusiasm among students, the club members designed pep signs and placed them throughout the school before athletic events.

As the curtain opens on Come Blow Your Horn, Alan Baker (Tom Delaney) and his upstairs neighbor, Peggy (Cyndy Wayman), are returning from a Vermont skiing trip. Peggy tries to resist as Alan coaxes her into his apartment for "Just five more minutes. Come on."

When Alan protests his mother's decision to move into his "bachelor pad," Jane Costa retorts, "Where else have I got to go? Ah hotel? Maybe I should move in with his sister Gussie? I'll join the Army first. I've got that stick in the heart again!"

Thespians stage three act comedy in October

Following Come Blow Your Horn, the Dramatic Club's fall production, members who had accumulated enough points for membership in the National Thespian Society spent a day in New York City.

Highlighting the trip, the group saw the longest running show at present on Broadway, Barefoot in the Park. It was of particular interest because the comedy was written by the same playwright who wrote the club's October production.

With the beginning of rehearsal for the varsity choir's spring musical, Dramatic Club members constructed sets and worked on the production crew for Oklahoma!

Fourteen club members earned membership into National Thespian, bringing membership total to eighteen.

When Alan's brother Buddy (John Seider), confronts Peggy she asks, thinking he's a Hollywood producer, "Do I do a scene? Or kind of take on a character like in class. Or is just talking like this enough?" Buddy replies, "Oh, it's plenty!"

Alan's love life is complicated by the return of his girl friend, Connie (Pam Morgan). When he moves in for "one kiss," she retreats with, "Now, Alan, play fair."

The second act finds Alan shocked to see a "new" Connie. When he protests that the change is "not funny any more" she says, "Isn't this what you want? . . . what you asked for?"

Players hold match; students form new orchestra

During the Christmas season, the orchestra accompanied the choir in its presentation of a modern cantata, Night of Wonder.

Supplementing the high school orchestra, Mr. Marcy formed a new youth orchestra adding junior high students to the group.

Working toward a spring concert, the new orchestra held weekly evening rehearsals.

Relaxing after a day of classroom activities, chess club members competed informally, attempting to accumulate a large number of points for their winning efforts. Thirty-five area schools were invited to a tournament here April 8.

The three best chess club members held a match with three members of the Oneonta Chess Club April 17.

Laboratory assistants, library club aid teachers

Math-Science Club members initiated a program in which interested and capable students assisted science teachers with their laboratory responsibilities.

Students performed experiments and pursued projects in particular fields of science, talking informally with professors at both SUCO and Hartwick College. In May, the group visited research laboratories in Schenectady.

Assisting Mrs. Gould and Mrs. Bryant with the maintenance of the library, sixteen students worked a minimum of one period a week, checking in books, punching library cards, and supervising the general use of the room.

Primarily a service organization, the library club held a tea for the high school faculty in November and sponsored a candy sale.

Choir enacts Oklahoma! wears new gold robes

Oklahoma! brought the West to Oneonta as the ninety-voice varsity choir presented the musical March 10 and 11 to a full house. Donald Gratz as Curly and Pamela Morgan as Laurey played the leads while Dudley Scott, Rosemary Truman, Pamela Starr, Richard Fletcher, and John Seider held supporting roles.

Pianists Colleen Seeley, Joan Polley, Jane Costa, and John Shilling accompanied the production on twin pianos. Mr. Walley directed the music; Mr. Chamard, the acting.

The choir wore their new gold robes for the first time as they presented a modern cantata, the Night of Wonder, at the Christmas concert. The holiday schedule included performances at Rotary, Kiwanis, and Bresee's.

Chosen through competitive solo work, Rosemary Truman, Richard Fletcher, and Dudley Scott sang in the All-State Choir at Buffalo.

In May, the choir competed for a rating in competition with other New York state choirs. A concert of sacred music culminated the choir's schedule of appearances.

Band creates formations in Tag Day recognition

Beginning the school year with an effective display of original maneuvers, the band demonstrated new marching techniques and stirred school spirit as it performed at the home football games in the fall.

In special recognition of Tag Day, band members created appropriate formations—a boat and a bicycle, showing travel in foreign lands. The band also participated in the Halloween and Memorial Day parades.

After football season, the band concentrated on a program of scheduled concerts. Comprising a brass ensemble of trumpets, trombones, and French horns, Scott Ackerson, Toni Lewis, Shera DeLello, Joel Sheesley, Cheryl Bateman, David Yager, and Mary Nevill presented traditional carols at the Christmas concert.

Eleven band members participated in the County Music Festival band. Other instrumentalists competed for ratings in the state music festival in May.

The band performed in Worcester March 17 and presented a spring concert May 5.

Following the fall marching practices the band settled inside to rehearse concert music in preparation for spring appearances.

Echoites attend ESSPA convention in September

Proudly reviewing the third issue of the Echo editors Sue Moore, Karen Wilson, editor-in-chief, Jim Ballantine, and Jo Garhart, preview the newspaper upon its arrival from Cooperstown.

Attending the annual ESSPA convention at Syracuse University last September, Karen Wilson, Susan Moore, and Priscilla Garhart gained knowledge of the arts and skills of newspaper production from classes, clinics, and seminars.

At the convention, the Echo received awards for newsprinting, sports, and editorials.

The use of different type gave the Echo a new look this year. With the close of the Star Job Shop, they found a new printer, the Freeman's Journal in Cooperstown.

In order to train interested underclassmen for the newspaper next year, Echo editors conducted a workshop in the spring.

Juniors published the May issue of the Echo. Next year's newly-elected staff tried its hand at writing under the guidance of this year's senior staff.

The year ended with a joint publications banquet and a picnic. Guests at the banquet included the parents of senior editors and the new staff.

'67 OHSan staff meets final March deadline

Working feverishly toward the deadline, editors and staff members completed the book during the first three weeks of March. OHSans ordered pizza and submarine sandwiches and cooked TV dinners in a petri dish sterilizer as they rushed to meet the March 20, deadline.

Planning sessions held during the summer months got the book off to an early start. Picture schedules, layouts, and picture taking occupied the fall and winter months. Elizabeth Ditmer attended the ESSPA convention September 30–October 1.

As the book neared completion staff members met after school, Saturdays, and numerous evenings to write copy, headlines, and captions; tag pictures; and recopy layouts.

This year's staff continued the progressive trend in yearbooks with individual teacher informals, new-style division pages, a student life section, and a black "ink" cover sketch.

With the completion of the book in March, the editors settled down to a more relaxed pace, proofreading page proofs and making plans for a workshop to acquaint next year's staff with the problems and practices of the yearbook.

Big upset of Norwich highlights grid season

The varsity football team, after suffering heavy losses through graduation, completed a six and two season by defeating arch rival Norwich and gaining a tie for first place in the Iroquois League.

Led by all-Iroquois League players Bill Wilsey, Steve Colwell, Terry Cook, Ed Syron, and Ray Cower, the Jackets followed an early season loss to Ilion with five straight victories in league competition.

The season was climaxed by a victory over undefeated Norwich. The defense, led by co-captain Joe Mitchell, and the offense, highlighted by a balanced running and passing attack, defeated the Purple Tornadoes on their home field.

The victory avenged a defeat the previous season by Norwich and marked the second straight three-way title tie for the Jackets.

Hoopsters capture third straight championship

Recovering from a schedule of tough early season non-league opponents, the basketball team went on to win the Iroquois League Championship for an unprecedented third straight time.

A string of eleven league wins, highlighted by some thrilling last minute victories, brought the Jackets the title. The junior backcourt combination of John Zagata and Terry Deery took charge of the ball handling chores. John, the team's leading scorer, pulled out an important victory over Ilion with a sixty foot shot in the last seconds of the game.

Seniors Ed Syron, Terry Cook, and Garry Scutt controlled the boards and got the necessary points from inside. Chuck Hale played the role of sixth man and gave the hoopsters extra rebounding strength when needed.

A pressure defense combined with a fast break offense propelled OHS through the second half of the season. Coach George Matola substituted liberally, giving all the players a chance to test their skills.

Although hopes for a Section III title were snuffed out by a strong opening round opponent, Rome Free Academy, the team placed two members, John Zagata and Ed Syron, on the Iroquois League All Star Team with Terry Cook and Garry Scutt receiving honorable mention.

Victories in tournament increase trophy points

Winter sports teams, after a rocky season, came on to take the table tennis title and a share of the badminton title in the Winter Sports Tournament. This success at the end of the season gained one hundred sixty valuable points for Oneonta toward the All Sports Trophy.

The volleyball team finished with a three and three record and a third in the tournament.

Badminton, four and two in the season, tied for first in the tournament behind the doubles championship of Jim Lewis and Mark Sarrge.

After winning two and losing four over the season, the table tennis team won the tournament title with the help of the doubles championship taken by John Hawley and Bob Hansen.

Gymnasts retain title, present co-ed exhibition

The gymnastics team, in only the third year of its existence, came through a strong schedule with a nine and one record and climaxed the season by retaining the Mohawk Valley Gymnastics League Championship and by taking a second place finish in the Section III Tournament.

Coach Edward Konopa got a well balanced effort out of his team led by Tim Chase on the side horse, Lou Laterra on the rings, Jim Couden on the high bar, and Joe Knapp in floor exercise, vaulting, and on the parallel bars. A promising crop of underclassmen bolstered the team throughout the season.

Seventy boys and girls on the combined gymnastics teams presented the Third Annual Gymnastic Exhibition. The program included eight Olympic events; a Filipino folk dance, tininkling; a Danish gym routine; and a display of gymnastics movements done with luminescent ribbons and special lighting in a darkened gym.

Slow start, fast finish attain tie for Jackets

Following a slow start, the Jacket baseball team rebounded to gain a share of the Iroquois League title. Poor fielding and wild pitching contributed to the first losses.

After a one run victory over Frankfort and a sixteen run defeat of Bainbridge-Guilford, the team started to live up to their early season potential. A thirteen game winning streak carried the team to a tie for the league crown with Norwich.

The 1966 season was highlighted by the beginning of play on the high school field and a second place finish in the Section 3 tournament.

Last year's powerful track team, led by record breakers Don Fuller and Jim Potter, swept to an undefeated dual meet season and a first place in the Iroquois League meet.

The Jackets ran up scores of one hundred or more four times and scored decisive victories over perennial rivals Norwich and Frankfort. They ended the season with a second place finish in the Section III Class B meet.

Don Fuller set new records in the mile, half-mile, and high jump; Jim Potter in the high and low hurdles; Dave Montgomery in the pole vault; and the relay team in the 880 yard relay.

Mike House puts all his concentration into returning a precise forehand shot beyond his opponent's reach during singles match.

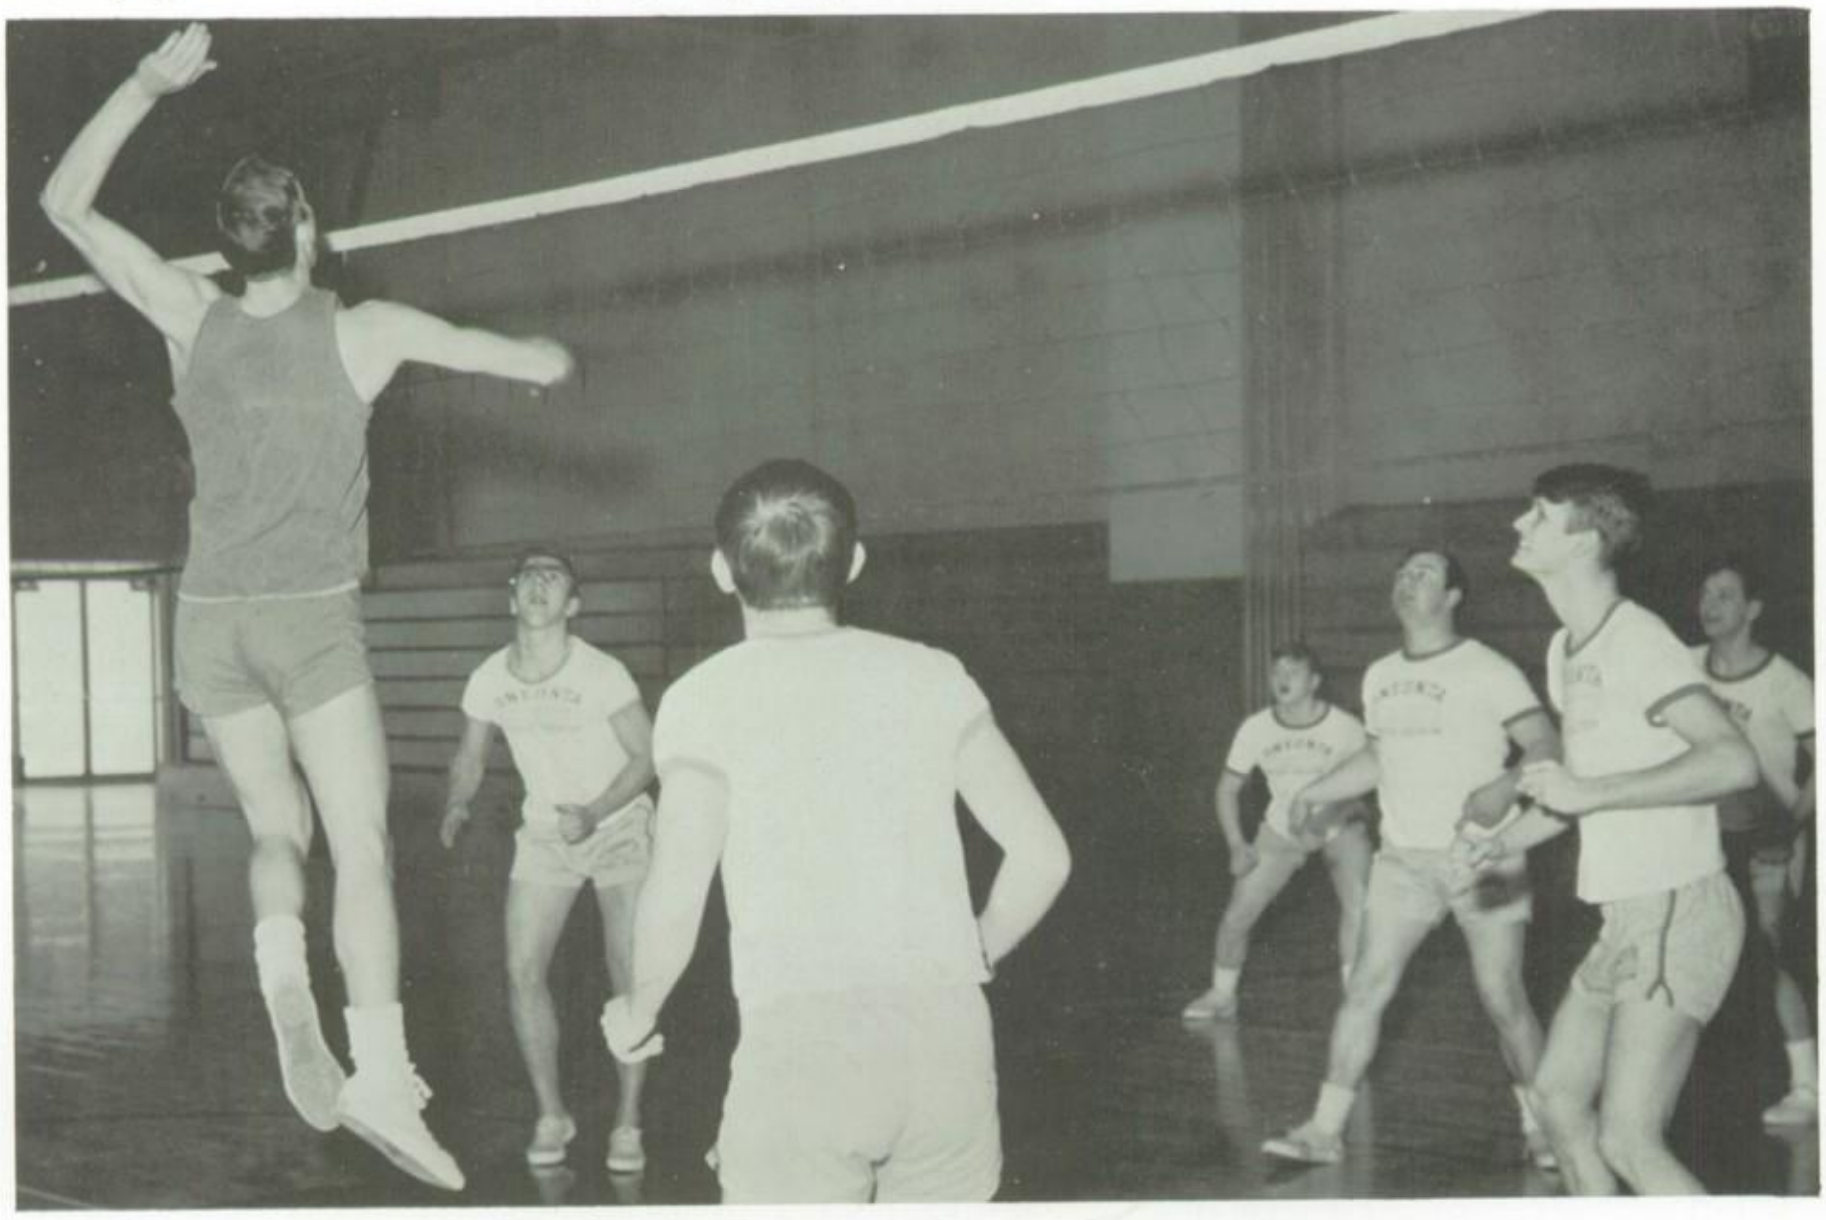
Positioning for a rebound, teammates exhibit intense concentration as Jim Salisbury attempts to block a driving layup.

Reaching high above the net, Chuck Hale skillfully attempts to spike the volleyball through the opponents' defensive alignment.



Volleyball attracts many; bowling joins program

The boys' intramural program gave students an opportunity to participate in sports without the constant practicing necessary for interscholastic competition.

The fall soccer program included four teams. Navy and Notre Dame tied for first place with five and one records.

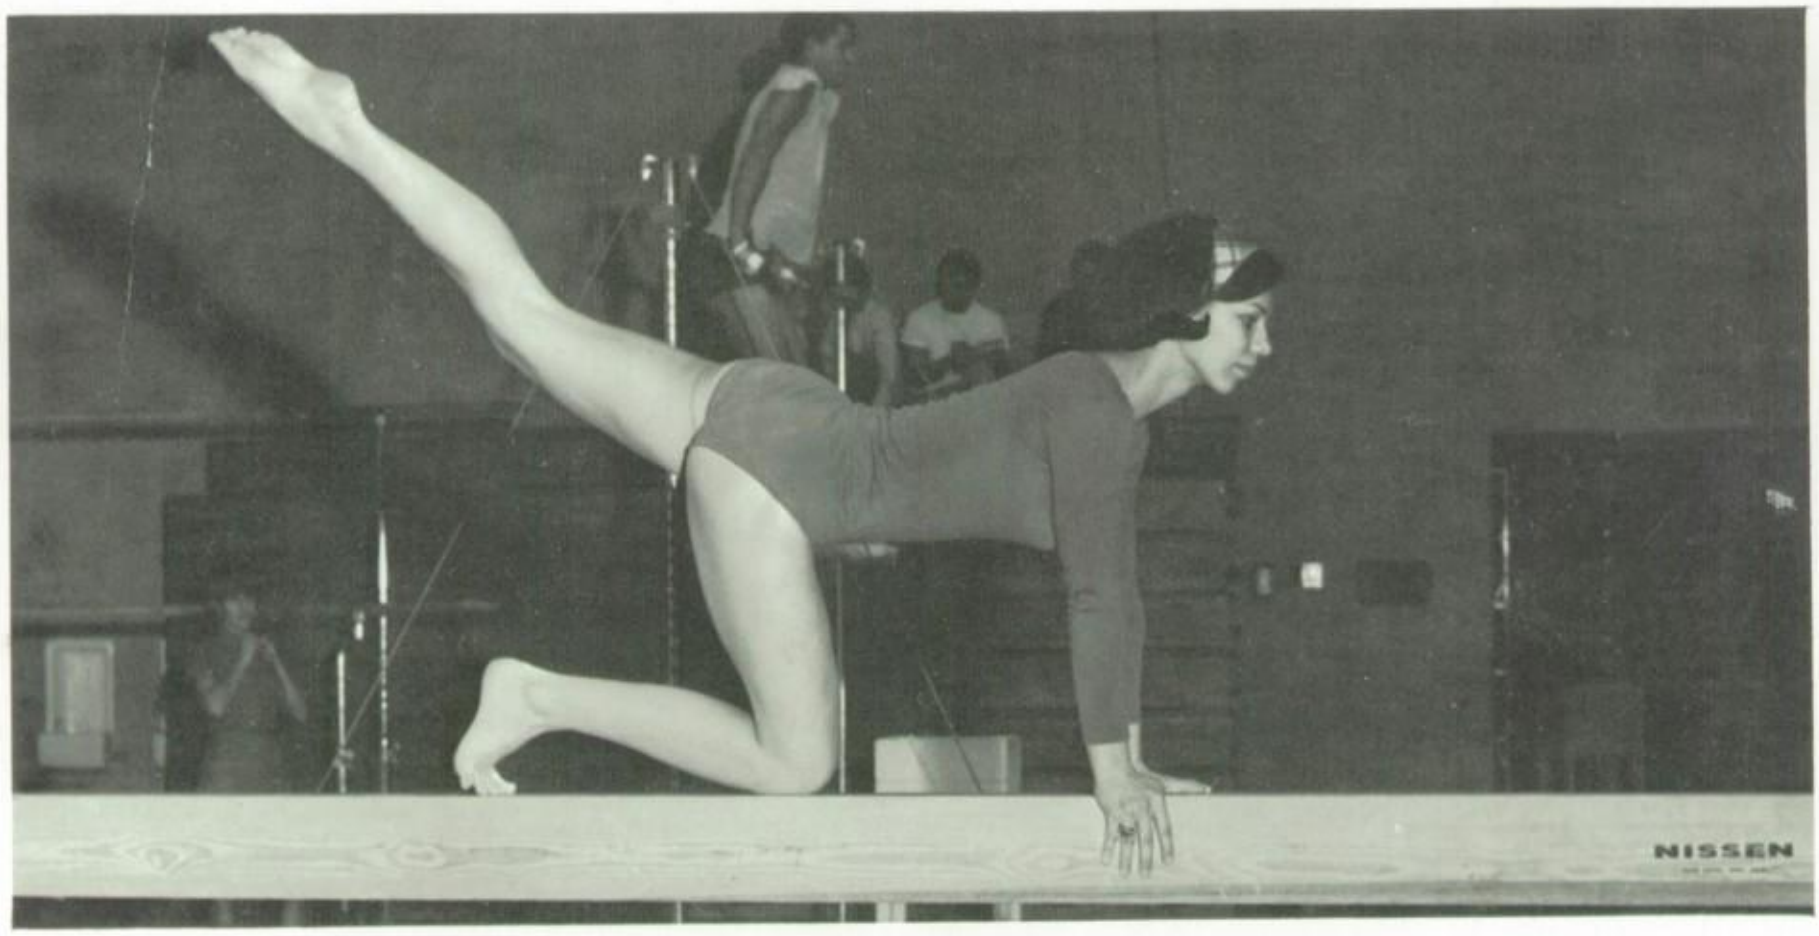
Basketball drew six teams and, though troubled by a shortage of officials, games were generally closely contested. Clarkson won the title with a nine and one record.

Bowling was included on the intramural agenda for the first time this year and drew an enthusiastic following. Hartwick, with a twenty-two and five slate, finished on top of the league.

Volleyball drew about eighty boys into a ten-team league with sharp competition among the top teams. UCLA ended with an undefeated record.

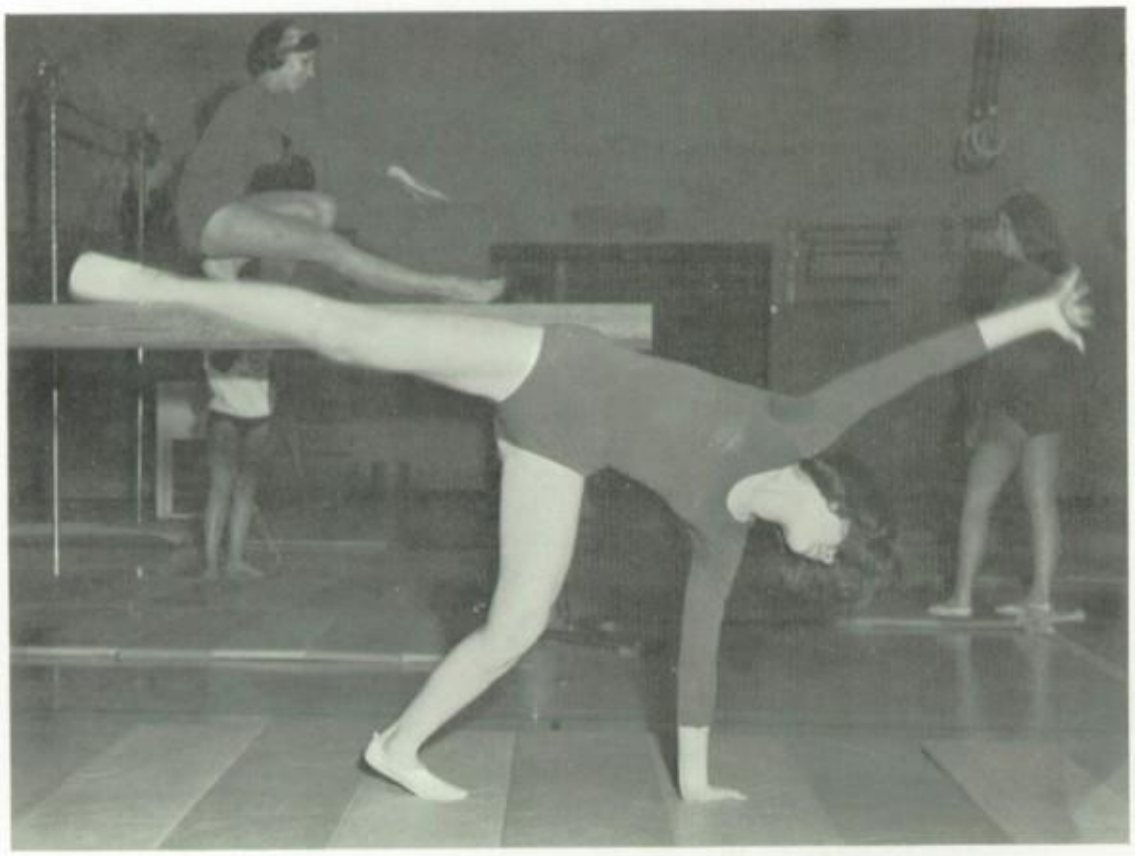
Straining volleyball players create a veritable fence of arms along the net in a display of the enthusiasm which made volleyball the most popular intramural sport.

Three determined defensemen thwart a desperate drive to the goal as they converge on a fallen opponent during an exciting soccer match.



Exhibiting the grace and agility necessary in gymnastics, Gee Schlenk ermann holds a perfectly executed scale on the balance beam.

Striving for the perfect combination of skill and form, Sue Moore practices cartwheels and handsprings after school during gymnastics in preparation for the exhibition.



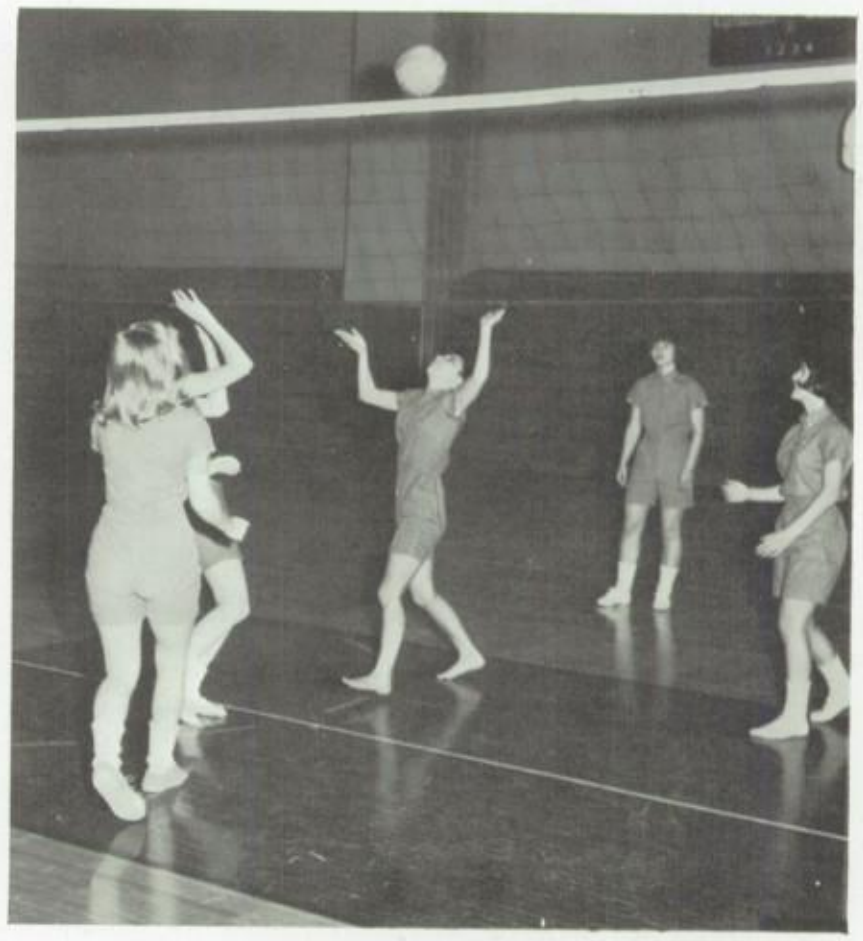
Girls earn intramural awards for participation

Throughout an extensive girls' intramural program, students participated in a variety of team and individualized sports. Team sports included field hockey, soccer, basketball, volleyball, and softball. Gymnastics, bowling, tennis, and archery completed the offerings.

Students earned points as a result of their participation in school sports. The accumulation of these points made many participants eligible for intramural awards such as numerals, letters, or bars.

Selected girls from the intramural squads comprised the interscholastic sports teams. Under this program, Oneonta competed with area schools in all sports except tennis and archery.

Oneonta girls were victorious at both the tri-county basketball tournament and the tri-county gymnastics meet sponsored by the Girls' Leaders Club.



Reaching up desperately, Joanne Spinola prepares to return the ball positioned by Lorraine Sanik and Betty Limerick.

Attempting to score a goal, Ellen Gordon accurately kicks the soccer ball past a waiting opponent toward the defensive goal.

VARSITY CHEERLEADERS—R. Schlenkermann, B. Root, A. Wislous, D. Cower, head, S. Sargent, K. Clarkson, L. Molinari.

Take it for a test drive.
See if you pass.

The real test in a Volkswagen is to see if you know what driving really is. (If you think you're driving in other cars, then what you do in a VW is something else.)

Most cars give you all the lively moving sensation of sitting on your living room couch. But the VW isn't sprung like other cars. Its 4-wheel torsion bar suspension (the kind they have in racers) gives you the feel of the road. You always know what's going on because you know what your car's going on.

And you know what's coming, because you'll see more road than you ever saw before. (Our sloping hood doesn't cut off your view.)

When you twist the steering wheel a little, you can feel the front wheels turn a little. So you know the car's doing just what you told it to. (Doesn't that sound satisfying?)

We can tell you that the VW parks shorter than other cars, and maneuvers more easily.

But we can't tell you how it feels to drive one.

So take the test.

Maybe you can tell us.

Rod,
Sure hope the Very best in college and everything you do. I hope you still will go out with me this Summer, cause I'm not going steady cause it was you at my dance it was a blast. Lets always be friends.

Rod had a little car
And it was painted Red,
And every where Rod went
The cops picked up the Dead.

Love Always
Sandi

Is a man for
~~that~~ Good luck!
